Now the summer bright is here.
(Winter lingers at the door)
While the flowers are in bloom
Through the summer everywhere
Summer never at the grave
For the knight, nor for the slave,
And the maiden's ever true
With the winter's mantle.
'Round the tombstone they cling
And o'er the graves they sing
And the faithful stars at night
Gaily, softly, richly bright
The fair distance where I see
Sits golden-haired pagans
One I love and who loves me.

'Tis the dusky dark of eve
When the good folk singly leave
The sayings of their ev'n mass,
Plinking flowers as they pass—
The kindly folk of Wheeling town
(Tho' they're worth a hundred crown)
Each wear a flower, bud, or rose.

One flower I saw, in soft repose,
Was nestled on a sweet girl's breast.
No one, this flower had ever cared,
For it was fresh as newly torn
And had contained it to be worn
By one as true.

She led the throng
Murmuring a faintly Easter song.
And her hair was doubly pure,
For she thought 'twas 'twas pure
At the tombstones where they pass—
The kindly folk of Wheeling town
(Tho' they're worth a hundred crown)
Each wear a flower, bud, or rose.

UNSATURATED HABITS.
How the Habit of Spitting May Spread Contagious Diseases, Particularly Tuberculosis.

Sir:—The following extracts from a paper read before the New York Academy of Medicine January 2, 1892, by T. Mitchell Prudden, M. D., will give your readers some clue as to the precision of knowledge which marks the decade now closing, as to the causes and prevention of infectious diseases, especially consumption. In 1882 Dr. Koch announced that tuberculosis was caused by a living germ.

"The places outside of the bodies of living beings in which the bacillus of tuberculosis is to be especially found under ordinary conditions with us are in the flesh and milk and discharges of tubercular persons, especially of those who are the victims of tuberculosis of the lungs. But by far and away the most common and abundant lurking place of this germ is the sputum (spit) in pulmonary tuberculosis."

"When the sputum dries the bacilli are still firmly held in place so long as the desiccated mass remains intact. But let this once be pulverized by the foot on floor or carpet, by rubbing between folds of cloth or in any other way, and these virulent particles can mingle at once with other dust and become subject to the same physical laws of transport and diffusion."

"It is to be distinctly understood that the breath of consumptives, apart from solid particles which may now and then be cast off in coughing, conveys no germs."

"But if tubercle bacilli are cast off alive from the bodies of its victims, or can be consumed in the meat and milk of tubercular cattle, are not these cast off or consumed germs the sources from which new disease is propagated? If this were true, then tuberculosis is a communicable disease. The main point is that tuberculosis is a communicable disease, and that the chief element in its conveyance is the uncleaned sputum of the victims of pulmonary tuberculosis."

"The fact is that such infectious diseases as typhoid fever, diphtheria and tuberculosis can be highly contagious or made scarcely at all so, depending upon the care or lack of care which is taken by the victims or their attendants in the disposal of their varying excretions or discharges."

"How contagious tuberculosis (consumption) actually is under the conditions which prevail to-day, it is not within the scope of my theme to consider now. But I do not see why it should not continue just as ominous, or become even more so, if the present unsanitary habits continue in public and private places. If the vile and increasing practice of well nigh indiscriminate spitting goes on unchecked in nearly all assembling places and public conveyances; if the misguided women who trail their skirts through the unspeakable and infectious filth of the street are to be admitted uncleaned into houses and churches and theaters; if theaters and court rooms and school houses and cars are to remain the filthy lurking places of contagia which their ill-ventilation which their mostly ignorant and careless so-called cleaning necessarily entail; if in sleeping cars and hotel rooms the well are to follow consumptives in their occupancy without warning or even the poor show of official disinfection; if no persistent warning is to be given to the ignorant of the dangers which lurk in uncleanness—then our task will be most complex as well as difficult in limiting the contagiousness of tuberculosis."

"The task of reform is not less than colossal at best, nor is it by any thing less than long-continued and well-directed labor that substantial good can come. Each victim of tuberculosis is discharging thousands, if not millions, of virulent germs every day upon our ill-kept streets and in places where the well must go."

"How the sputum in tuberculosis can be best rendered harmless it does not fall within the scope of my theme to discuss, nor is the question of tubercular meat and milk upon my list."

"But this seems certain: that whatever public and private measures for the prevention of tuberculosis we may decide upon as wise must be so conceived that education will go hand in hand with the law. Tuberculosis is contagious; wise teaching can show that its degree of contagiousness depends largely upon the comportment of the victims themselves. But let us not forget that death meanwhile holds carnival."

ABOUT VENTILATION.
A Scientific Explanation of the Subject. Contemporary Review.

The healthy atmosphere in a room is one in which the air is changed to the extent of 3,000 cubic feet per hour per adult inmate. The air admitted need not be cold; warmed air, so long as it is fresh, is of course preferable to cold air in winter, but in some way the air must be brought in if we are to continue in health. There are various ways of doing this. One is by admitting cold air so that it is directed upward toward the ceiling, where the air of the room is at its highest temperature; the cold stream is then heated in its passage as it falls to the lower level for breathing. But in large rooms, to utilize at its best this current, there should be in the skirting outlets communicating with a heated up—cast flue, which will draw away the heavy air near the door. In cases where there is heating by hot water coils, the cold air may be brought in at or near the floor level and passed through the hot water coils—the outlet for vitiated air being in or near the ceiling—to a heated up-cast flue. In larger rooms or buildings for public assemblies it may be necessary with either of these systems to use a fan, either to propel fresh air into the room or to draw away the vitiated air. The great desideratum in the admission of fresh air is to cut it up into very fine streams, something in the way water is cut up in passing through the fine rose of a watering can. It has been found that air admitted through a tube or orifice of equisectional area throughout enters as a cold draught, but if the inlet be through a series of small truncated cones, the smaller section outward, the larger inward, with a wire gauze on the inside, the current is so cut up and diffused that the draught is not felt. By analogy, a mass of water entering through a narrow canal drives all before it and cuts a channel for itself, but the same quantity passing over a large surface of ground gently irrigates it. Another important point is not to let the passage of air be at too great a velocity; the gentler the flow the better.

THE DIFFERENT METHOD
Adopted by Dr. DaCosta to Reclaim Fallen Women—A Scene in Market Contrast to the One Witnessed by Dr. Parkhurst.

New York, April 18.—Rev. Dr. DaCosta, who has repeatedly criticized Rev. Dr. Parkhurst's methods of suppressing crime, returned to the charge again yesterday and divulged the information that he not only disapproved Dr. Parkhurst's methods, but attempted to prove his brother clergyman's alleged error by visiting the same haunts of vice and holding religious services. In fact Rev. Dr. DaCosta has been following in Dr. Parkhurst's wake, Bible and prayer book in hand. In his forenoon sermon yesterday Rev. Dr. DaCosta said: "Often it happens that the lower an individual has fallen the more susceptible his moral and spiritual instinct." He then gave illustration of the truth had offered within the past few days in the case of an individual reputed to be one of the wickedest women in New York. Yet there was a tender spot in that poor woman's heart, a sense of shame and a desire for something better.

Hence when one went to her abode introducing himself as an ambassador of Christ, he was kindly and courteously, and gladly received, and when the subject of her mother's memory was brought up, recalling the tender memories of a lost home, a once sweet life, of Sunday-school days and church going, of choir singing, and religion and lost purity, the woman gave way to convulsive sobs and shed tears of bitter repentance. Then when the time came she thankfully accepted the invitation to assemble her entire household for prayers, and in the very parlors, only a few days before the scene of disgusting orgies, the Magdalen humbly knelt and in plaintive tones spoke the prayer, "Forgive us our transgressions."

These words of Rev. Dr. DaCosta created a deep sensation. Police Captain Brogan was among the auditors.

Hattie Adams, who was seen later, said she did not know anything about Dr. Parkhurst's having been in the house, but she laughingly said she did remember that during the past week Dr. DaCosta had been there and held a prayer meeting in her parlor, to which she had invited all the women boarding in her house. The prayer meeting had been well attended.

The continued strength with the increasing activity in the stock market to-day showed that the bullish feeling among operators is increasing in Wall street. At the attacks of the bears only served to bring out new support. Richmond and West Point and New England were special examples of this. The principal sale of the bullish feeling is again in the coal stocks. ## IN THE SPRING!

In the vegetable kingdom, the sap or vital fluid rises from the roots to the trunk and branches, producing leaf and flower. So in the human family, the change is as great, for the blood, if not in good condition, must throw off its impurities. In this it is necessary to assist nature, and nothing is so good to as Swift's Specific. It helps nature to relieve the body, and at the same time tone it up.

Mr. RALPH ELKINS lives at Mariensville, Mo., and is a successful farmer. He says that he has been a great sufferer from impurities of the blood, which made his limbs stiff and gave him pain in the lungs, but that he took Swift's Specific and it soon relieved him entirely.
